Maloo Teas, and it is quite clear that these valuable compounds will have to go to some other part of the world to find consumors. The very simple pian has been adopted of all events in one instance of systematic fraud, it has been found possible to do something more than merely enter into fine disquisitions as to the exact extent to which the cheating goes, and whether it is very much worse than any other kind of cheating which happens not to be the subject of so much It would be rather awkward if the Offinese Government, took to condemning spurious shirtings, and seizing them as unfit been done with JOHNNY CHINAMAN'S Maloo Mixture. But for the fact that the fraudulent shirtings are not directly detrimental to health, the one scizure would be quite as i finite unable to discover whether it is the merchant who is at fault of the Chinese dealer. Probably the writer in the "Thunderer" had never heard of Chan Szecs, or it would not have long puzzled him to decide the question. Ten of this kind cannot be bought on this side without a very good moral did not contain anything new, and was knowledge on the part of the buyer of what it is be is purchasing, and in this case at least the blame cannot be laid upon the Chinese. Indeed, according to the market reports, it was pretty well known last year that some prodigious rubbish was being shipped to the London Market, and it is not very susprising that the matter should have gone to such lengths as to call for Government interference. Some idea seemed to be entertwined by the holders of Maloo Teas at home, that they were not being fairly dealt with in not being allowed sufficient time to ship their valuable cargoes off to some place where the Government is less philanthropic, but it does not appear to have been considered more justifiable to palm the rubbish off upon neighbouring nations than upon the British working man, and the sparious compound has received no quarter. There can be no question that this will press somewhat hardly upon some of the holders; but, after all, it is difficult to see that they are very much to be Port, as far as the entrances to the Yangtsze wave never known, and we shall see which sympathised with, as it has been notorious for a long time what is the nature of Tens of this description, and warning enough has been given that some such steps as those which have at last been taken, were very likely to be adopted, so that those who have been dealing in them have known very well the risks they were running. They had, in the first place, much pleasure in personally thanking him for the handsome letter-which he had sent giv to the communication from the Chamber. may be the The question of a survey of the coast had occupied the attention of the Chamber for a long time, and they were fortunate in having an Admiral representing a great nation, who took so much interest in the matter. They begged now to hand him a letter to the Hon, Mr. Robeson, the Secretary of the United States Navy, which gave the views of the Obainber, and, it backed up by Admiral Jenkins personally, on his return, it would be the very best annort the Chamber could receive. The mevery nearly the same in substance as the letter already addressed to Admiral Jenkins, American and British Navies bad always worked together in matters of this kind, and America. and England were the two commercial countries which had been most clusely connected with China from the early days of the Canton Fagtories to the present time. These two great Maritime Powers were those from whom work of this kind must be expected. Germany had now also large interests in China, and doubt by and by, when her Navy is increased, will be willing to assist, but had now hardly vessels to spare. He felt confident that this appeal for the co-operation of the United States Navy would meet with some consideration; especially if supported by Admiral,

Mr. Gwynno was the son of Colonel Gwynne, and was connected with an old family who hold estates in Carmarthenshire, Some time ago be had some differences with his family, and became a cabitriver in Liverpool. In this occupation he was much liked by his brother whips, and was respectful, but distant, to strangers who employed bini. He died at the age of 73, and almost up to the day of his death be mounted the box with the greatest re-

plaint; nor was his mental vigour babind his An Englishman had bired a smart travelling servant, and on arriving at an inn one evening, knowing well the stringency, of police regula-tions in Austria, where he was, he called for the usual register of travellers, that he might duly inscribe himself therein. His servant replied that he bad anticipated his wishes, and bad registered han in full form as an "English gentleman, of independent property."-"But how have you put down my name?' I have not told it to you."-" It can't exactly pronounce it, but I copied it faithfully from J. AND R. J. milor's portinantean."—" But it is not there. J. PORTER. LITERARY GOSSIP-The Athenaum understands that Dr. 'Hessey's sermon on the death . tr 1130 Hongkong, 11th May, 1867. of Sir Edwin Landseer, preached at St. Paul's, will be published immediately, by Mr. Murray. Among forthcoming publications is a new " Life and Conversations of Dr. Samuel Johnson," by Mr. Alexander Main, with a preface by Mr. G. H. Lewes. The Life, although o course, founded chiefly upon Boswell's work has, we are told, been entirely re-written with a view to meeting the wants of a new time. A second edition of Mr. Main's selections of sayings from George Eliot, with supplementary sayings from "Middlemarch," is in preparation. Mr. John Hollingsbead's Stories and Essays, which have already passed through several editions, will shortly be published by Tinsley Brothers, in a new and improved form.

OR comprehensiveness and practical service STEAMERS, leaving this port requiring COAL, can obtain it from the Underthis Work stands arrivalled. All the new signed. words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are beire given in extenso. Euch and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exeroises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast goonomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have SEBINGS, Black and Blue CLOTH, DOEheretofore characterized Chinese publications. SLOGGER. It was necessary for the distributors of the funds to act with the greatest caution. It being pretty generally known how I stood in the matter, I was frequently stopped in the street by people anxious to press their claims. They were mostly persons I did not know; but one day to my surprise, and I must add to my indignation, I was stopped by a man who in the popular phrase, I knew (by sight and reputation) much better than I respected. His name was Jack H---, but he was usually spoken of as "Ginghams," or "The "; the first nickname having reference to the fact of his gaining a livelihood. by selling second-hand umbrellas about the Detached and semi-destreets; the other to his having in his younger days been a pugilist of some local He was not about five-and-forey. stood six feet, was largely built, and with coarse red hair, high check-bones, small sunken eyes, a broken nose, and a face deeply pitted with the small-pox. Wearing a great hairy cap on his head, he cortainly looked a rather fearsome customer as he approached me with a short black pipe in his "Day, guy nor," he said gruffly. and jerking out his words as though he were forcing himself to speak. I returned his month. good day; and I suppose that either my. tone or looks expressed the astonishment which I felt at his addressing me, for in the same gruff tone he went on—" I see you're took aback at me a-speaking to you; but I don't mind that; I knew you would be, for "I ain't none of yor creepin' or cantin' sort If I'm a rough customer, I'm open, and I don't care for nolody as don't care for me. and never asts nobody for nothink cepting it's a glass of beer of a pal when I'm hard up, which I'm always good to stand a glass if a mate asts me, if I've got the browns and he-hasn't; howsumever, that's ucither here nor there, and ain't what I want to speak to you about." "What do you want to speak to me about?" I asked rather curtly "Well, that's straight hittin' anyhow," he kong Canton, Fouchow, Shanghai, and Hansaid "but I ain't got anything to say against it, so here goes to come to the point." He paused for a moment, as if to arrange his thoughts, and then abruptly exclaimed. "Look here, guy'nor, aiu't you one on 'em as has got the givin of the tickets for this ere relief fund, as they calls it?" "I am," I answered, with an emphasis, about the meaning of which I intended there should be no mislake. He understood me, and answered-"Oh, I take, guv'nor, you've got stored therein, subject to a bonus of 20 per the tickets, and you've got sense enough not cent. to give any on 'em to the likes o' me. That's about the state o' the poll, ch? Well, you needn't alarm yourself," he continued, without giving me time to make any reply, "I ain't going to ask you for a ticket for myself." about selling what he called. "The celebrated medicated cough lozenges," and by way of a trade-cry he was constantly calling out, "Cough no more, gentlemen, cough no more," and by this phrase applied to himself as a nickname he was popularly known in the neighbourhood. I explained to the Slogger that I knew whom he meant, adding that the relief fund was a special one intended chiefly to help those who had been brought to distress by the closing of the shipyards. "Well, that needn't stand in the way of your giving Jimmy a lift, if so be as you're minded to. It's true, he didn't actually work in the yards, but all the same, it's their yards kept him going."
